Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 09 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very cold and windy with snow showers.

Today:
Strong easterly winds will make it feel very cold across southern UK, with further snow showers feeding westwards. These showers merging into some longer spells of snow over some eastern areas, whilst generally drier and brighter in western parts.

Tonight:
Some clear intervals, but often a good deal of cloud giving a few light snow showers in the west, but more frequent and heavier in some eastern areas.

Wednesday:
Further snow showers in the east, whilst many western parts will be dry with some sunshine, but very cold again. Less windy.

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Remaining very cold with overnight frosts, although snow showers easing. Bright/sunny in the east, but becoming increasingly windy and cloudy in the west/south-west with risk of snow and coastal gales.
